

Advanced empathy: An accelerated workshop on advanced empathy

Presented by

Associate Professor Richard Lakeman

At the ACMHN's 46th International Mental Health Conference. Mental Health Nursing in a climate of change. Marriott Resort, Gold Coast, QLD on the 7th-9th September 2022

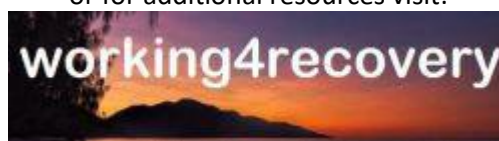

Mental health service users frequently rate the communication of empathy as the most valued capability of mental health nurses. Empathy is the most researched component of the therapeutic alliance, which is the most robust predictor of good outcomes for service users. Mental health nurses engage with people in extreme states, challenging people's capacity to respond with empathy. This masterclass explores the importance of empathy and how this communicative skill can be employed therapeutically when working with people experiencing extreme states, perceptual disturbances, or expressing delusional ideas.

To download all the handouts associated with this workshop scan this code:

or for additional resources visit:

www.Working4recovery.com or <https://testandcalc.com/>